Appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York (Hurd, J.).

UPON DUE CONSIDERATION, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the judgment of the district court is AFFIRMED IN PART and VACATED IN PART, and this matter is REMANDED for proceedings consistent with this order.

The mother of a public school student, Plaintiff-Appellant Jennifer Vitsaxaki sued Defendants-Appellees Skaneateles Central School District and Skaneateles Central Schools' Board of Education (collectively "the School District"), challenging their policy of using "the name and pronoun that corresponds to the gender identity the student consistently asserts at school," App'x 83, even when that name and pronoun is inconsistent with the student's name and pronouns assigned at birth, without requiring notification to the parent of the student's request ("the Policy"). Vitsaxaki sought declaratory relief and damages based on allegations that the policy violated procedural and substantive due process and her free exercise rights.

The district court granted the School District's motion to dismiss Vitsaxaki's claims. See Vitsaxaki v. Skaneateles Central School District, 771 F. Supp. 3d 106, 123 (N.D.N.Y. 2025). The court concluded that Vitsaxaki had failed to adequately allege a likelihood of future harm sufficient to support standing for declaratory relief; that she failed to allege that the challenged policy violated a fundamental right or imposed a substantial burden on her religious exercise such that strict scrutiny would apply, and the policy satisfied rational basis review; and that she failed to allege a protected liberty interest that would implicate procedural due process protections. We assume the parties' familiarity with the underlying facts, the procedural history of the case, and the issues on appeal.

We review the grant of a motion to dismiss under Rules 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6) without deference to the district court's reasoning. See Palmer v. Amazon.com, Inc., 51 F.4th 491, 503 (2d Cir. 2022). The inquiry for a Rule 12(b)(1) facial challenge to standing is whether the pleading "alleges facts that affirmatively and plausibly suggest that the plaintiff has standing to sue." Carter v. HealthPort Techs., LLC, 822 F.3d 47, 56 (2d Cir. 2016).¹ Under Rule 12(b)(6), if, accepting all factual allegations in the complaint as true and drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff, the complaint fails to plausibly state a claim, then dismissal is warranted. See Marcus & Cinelli, LLP v. Aspen Am. Ins. Co., 158 F.4th 333, 340 (2d Cir. 2025); see also Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009).

While this appeal was pending, the United States Supreme Court issued a per curiam decision in Mirabelli v. Bonta. 146 S. Ct. 797 (2026).² The parties agree

² The Supreme Court has since denied certiorari review of two recent Circuit decisions upholding that this decision at least partially undermines the district court's reasoning as to the Free Exercise and Due Process issues. For that reason, we vacate the district court's judgment for the School District with respect to Vitsaxaki's claims for damages, and we remand for the court to consider how Mirabelli may affect the analysis in the first instance. See Women's Health Services, Inc. v. Maher, 636 F.2d 23 (2d Cir. 1980) (remanding for district court to consider effect of potentially controlling intervening decision of United States Supreme Court).

As to Vitsaxaki's claim for declaratory relief, she lacks standing because the requested relief is wholly retrospective and she has not pled any likelihood of future harm. Her complaint seeks a declaration that "the School District's policy facially and as applied to Mrs. Vitsaxaki violates her First and Fourteenth Amendment rights under the United States Constitution." App'x 47. But the only instance of the Policy's application to Vitsaxaki and her child occurred in 2021, and Vitsaxaki has since enrolled her child in a private school and has not pled that she would re-enroll her child in Skaneateles public schools if the policy were changed. Indeed, on appeal Vitsaxaki explicitly characterizes the similar policies. Foote v. Ludlow School Committee, No. 25-77, 2026 WL 1052101 (U.S. Apr. 20, 2026); Littlejohn v. School Board of Leon County, No. 25-259, 2026 WL 1127219 (U.S. Apr. 27, 2026).

declaratory relief sought as “retrospective.” Appellant’s Br. at 61. When it comes to claims for “injunctive and declaratory relief” specifically, it “is clear that the existence of an official policy, on its own, is not sufficient to confer standing to sue” absent a threatened injury pursuant to that policy that is “certainly impending, or there is a substantial risk that the harm will occur.” Dorce v. City of New York, 2 F.4th 82, 95 (2d Cir. 2021). Because, on the pleadings before us, there is no likelihood that the child or Vitsaxaki would be subject to the Policy in the future, there is no likelihood of future harm to support standing to seek declaratory relief.

Vitsaxaki concedes that the relief she seeks is solely retrospective but attempts to rely on out-of-circuit caselaw to support the proposition that she can nevertheless seek “retrospective declaratory relief.” See Collins v. Daniels, 916 F.3d 1302, 1315 (10th Cir. 2019); Crue v. Aiken, 370 F.3d 668, 677 (7th Cir. 2004). This argument is foreclosed by binding Second Circuit precedent consistently holding that, in accordance with the Supreme Court’s decision in City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95 (1983), “[a] plaintiff seeking injunctive or declaratory relief cannot rely on past injury to satisfy the injury requirement but must show a likelihood that he or she will be injured in the future.” Deshawn E. by Charlotte E. v. Safir, 156 F.3d 340, 344 (2d Cir. 1998); see also Diei v. Boyd, 116 F.4th 637, 643 (6th Cir. 2024) (explaining that language implying retroactive declaratory judgment in Crue “appears to be little more than an inartful description of the fact that a liability determination must accompany any damages award, not that such a declaration is available as a separate remedy”).

Vitsaxaki also argues that Mirabelli alters this analysis, but that decision is inapposite. It is true that the parents’ standing to seek a preliminary injunction was affirmed in that case, but the Court there focused on the scope of the injunction and whether it “provide[d] relief for all the parents of California public school students,” or “only for those parents who object to the challenged policies or seek religious exemptions,” lest the injunction also “grant relief to uninjured class members who lacked Article III standing.” Mirabelli, 146 S. Ct. at 802–03. The Court determined that the scope of the injunction was appropriate because the parents were “objects of the challenged exclusion policies” such that they “very likely have standing.” Id. Here, Vitsaxaki is no longer, and has not pled that she in the future will be, the object of the challenged policy. Mirabelli therefore does not change the fact that Vitsaxaki lacks standing for her requested declaratory relief, and we affirm the district court's dismissal of Vitsaxaki's claim for declaratory relief.

For these reasons, we AFFIRM in part and VACATE in part the judgment of the district court, and this matter is REMANDED for proceedings consistent with this order.
